

REFLECTION

In this Sunday's Gospel reading Jesus talks about hating our families. This is not a phrase to be taken literally, because that is not what the Lord intended. Jesus was talking to the Jewish people of his day and to them the phrase about hating their families simply meant 'Do not fall into the trap of loving them more than you love God.' It's a bit like that common phrase we use, 'See you later', even when we are not likely to see that person ever again; it's just a way of saying 'goodbye.' So when Jesus talks about hating our families, what he means is that the natural affection we have for them should not be allowed to deflect us from our life's mission (and vocation) of loving and serving God.

Even Jesus' own family seemed to fail to understand just what he was about and his relationship with them was marked by a degree of friction. In the early days of his mission such crowds gathered that he could not even have a meal: "When his family heard this," St Mark tells us, "they set out to take charge of him, saying, 'He is out of his mind.'" So it's clear that Jesus put his ministry before his family's feelings and in the end it meant that his mother was exposed to a great depth of grief. Yet Jesus did care, because even from the cross he took responsibility for his mother by entrusting her to the care of his young disciple, John.

So we must not think that we have no responsibilities to our families, because the Christian Faith teaches that we should care for them until we can do so no longer. St Paul writes in his first letter to Timothy, "Anyone who does not look after his own family has rejected the faith and is worse than an unbeliever." What we must realise is that as with all other aspects of this earthly life, love of family must not come before love for God.

The words of Jesus about hating our families are clarified in a parallel passage in St Matthew's gospel: "Anyone who loves his father or mother, son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me," he says. He is not asking us to despise our own flesh and blood, but is simply making a comparison. In completing our mission we may discover that our love for Jesus is greater than that for our families; but the comparison will only become meaningful if we have first loved our families a great deal.

Congratulations to Andrew Walkey and Julie Longton, married this weekend at Falmouth

From Fr Brian

This weekend we bid a fond farewell to Father John Gilbert. We thank him for his dedicated service to the communities of Helston and Mullion and we ask for God's blessing as he prepares for his new ministry at Truro. The move of Father John will mean changes and challenges to us all. However, united in the power of the Gospel, I am confident that our parish will grow and flourish in the love of Jesus and bring that love to others.

The Big Picture - is back !!

Meeting Tuesdays in the hall at Falmouth at 7 pm
